

Writing Your Way Home

A 6-session workshop

September 27 – December 20, 2017

Wednesdays 1:30 – 3pm Eastern

The ‘practice of writing’ – what is it? Over the course of this workshop, you will be invited to process your own ‘hero’s journey’ as you develop a writing practice. Along the way, you’ll explore and tweak your creative process, bring all of who you are to your communications with other people, and gain a magical tool for converting whatever life gives you into fuel for the journey to come. Conversations held on dates below; the writing room will be open at regular meeting times in between conversations, for Shut Up And Write practice.

Sep 27 | What is it to be creative?

The magic of talking to yourself, witnessing, and how it makes you different.

Oct 4 | Analogue girl in a digital world

Pen and paper versus typing. Deciding where your stories get told. Legal pads, sketch books, and journals, oh my!

Oct 11 | Public, private, secret, holy and burned

Writing to yourself, other people, god or the fire.

Nov 1 | Characters, costumes and funny objects

Letting yourself be someone else so you can bring all of who you are to the party.

Nov 29 | Body as writing instrument

Not writing as an act of writing. Moving as a tool for finding your words.

Dec 6 | Third, fourth and fifth places

Carving out creative space in the modern world. Picking your spots and deciding when to go.

On conversation days, I’ll teach for 20 minutes, answer questions for 30, and then we’ll all Shut Up And Write together for 40. Open to the public (not just business owners). $1,200 (or spread out your payments over 4 months) Email stella@stellaorange.com with questions and to register.

*Stephanie Saline has been writing letters, plays and journals for the past 28 years. She spent the last 8 years writing marketing and building a popular copywriting business at StellaOrange.com. She’s now in the mood for something entirely different. This.